

Financial Planning Association[®] Pro Bono Program

Providing free financial planning services to people in need

At a time of grief, dealing with financial matters may be the last thing you want to do. However, the need to make financial decisions is a reality that cannot be avoided. Prompt, sensible financial planning and timely actions can help you avoid or minimize potential financial hardships. And poor decisions could have a lasting negative on you and your loved ones.

The Financial Planning Association[®] may be able to help. FPA[®] volunteers have helped thousands of people struggling with unexpected turmoil in their lives – including survivors of 9/11, people affected by natural disasters, victims of domestic violence, and wounded military service members. Free consultations are provided on a pro bono basis by Certified Financial Planner[™] professionals, who must meet extensive training and experience requirements and abide by a strict code of ethics. No sales or promotion of products or services are allowed during a pro bono engagement, ensuring unbiased advice with no strings attached.
